A	PURPOSE
	This degree is designed to provide students with the foundations and the methodologies necessary to understand the various fields of humanities and their historical and cultural transformations, and to prepare students for further specializing studies. Although leading to the same "Laurea in Lettere," the programme is articulated into 4 tracks, or "curricula": C1- Classical Studies; C2-Modern literature and history; C3-Art history; C4-Territory, cultures and societies. Students will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - know and understand cultural, historical and social dynamics related to literature, languages and societies, with an emphasis on the Italian language in C2, on Latin and Greek in C1, and on modern foreign languages in C4; - acquire theoretical, methodological and practical skills to competently tackle, comprehend and analyse original texts and documents; - develop capacity and specific competences to use different types of texts, from direct communication to more complex literary works, for reading and writing criticism and essays on topics related to the core of each curriculum. In the frame of a strong grounding in Italian history and culture, each curriculum is oriented on a specific professional training. C1-Classical Studies provides training in classical languages and literatures, with the attending philological methodologies, and methodologies of critical reading. Besides excellent textual and language competence, it provides students with a solid grasp of ancient history and thought, and a general understanding of medieval to modern history. C2-Modern literature and history articulates the study of the European and transatlantic modern world, with its variety of histories, geographies and cultures. It provides students with a substantial knowledge of how artistic and literary productions work, privileging the study of linguistics, philology, cultural history and literature, Italian literature above all. In addition to the study of cultural and literary methodologies, it offers the possibility to follow several courses in history, geography, the arts, anthropology. C3-Art history is centered on the field of visual and performative arts from the middle ages to contemporary culture. It trains students to use iconographic, stylistic and technical instruments to read and interpret works of art, as well as architecture. C4-Territory, cultures and societies is centered on understanding the contemporary world, and has a strong foothold in geographical methodology and techniques. The stress is on cartography and national and international territoriality, as well as human and social geography. It also provides the students with a sure knowledge of languages other than Italian. Students will acquire: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - knowledge and understanding of cultural, historical and social dynamics related to literature and languages, with an emphasis on the Italian language;

	- theoretical, methodological and practical skills to competently tackle, comprehend and analyse original texts and documents; - capacity and specific competences to use different types of texts, from direct communication to more complex literary works, for reading and writing criticism and essays on topics related to the core of each curriculum.

C EMPLOYABILITY & FURTHER EDUCATION
1	EMPLOYABILITY Positions at Bachelor level in the public/private administration, libraries, archives, museums, touristic companies, publishers, press offices, theatrical, filmic and television productions.
2	FURTHER STUDIES This Bachelor program in Humanities offers a perfect bridging degree with Master programs in Humanities, or in related fields such as Literary Studies, Archeology, Classics, History of Art, Performing Arts, Media Studies.

D EDUCATION STYLE
1	LEARNING & TEACHING APPROACHES There are Lectures (also supported by audio and video contents) and a range of assignments that require varied presentation formats, accompanied by workshops and seminars; individual study based on textbooks and lecture notes; individual consultations with academic staff. Most learning is individual and emphasizes discussion in class. In the 3rd year a final thesis (6 ECTS credits) is written and presented and discussed in front of a group of teachers.

2	ASSESSMENT METHODS	Formative assessment is a fundamental part of the teaching and learning activities. Throughout the Programme students are encouraged to become independent and self-motivated learners, and to exploit opportunities to think for themselves. Small-group or individual tutorials, run alongside the lecture courses and addressing individual problems, allow the students to consolidate lecture material, as well as test understanding. Throughout the programme, students are engaged in class discussions, building up flexibility, open-mindedness, self-discipline, and self-motivation. Summative assessment is performed in several ways, according to the characteristics of each Module. Written exams (consisting of both closed and open questions), oral exams, oral presentations, continuing assessment, course work evaluation. Students are informed of the assessment procedure before the courses start and are also provided with previous examples. For the final exam (6 ECTS credits) students are asked to write a dissertation which will be on any approved topic relevant to the degree and the taught components. It is produced as a result of an individual research project undertaken during the course. Students are assigned a supervisor to guide the main stages of the work. This thesis will be discussed with a committee of university professors and experts who evaluate expository ability, the degree of independence in making judgments and the capacity to explain concepts and theories. Re-assessment procedures follow the principles decided at institutional level. Students can sit for exams at the end of each semester, in three official established dates (appelli) or in September, for a total of 7 times a year. An additional opportunity is offered in November each year for students who have not completed their degree requirements within three years. Students can repeat a failed exam at any exam date (appello), with no penalty whatsoever.
